ASSASSIN 'CHOSEN

VANCE DEATH THREAT NOTE

Above is a reproduction of the note which was found nailed to the inside wall of Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance's garage a few minutes after he was drenched with a pint of acid by an unknown assailant on Monday afternoon. Crudely scrawled on a wrinkled piece of cheap paper were the words: "Insp. Vance, Blindness. (Following which was a crude picture of a death's head.) Hannay's Pals."

Police declare that the writing on the note resembles that which appeared on previous threatening notes received by the inspector and also closely resembles the scribbled address which appeared on the wrapping of a bomb which had been sent to him through the mail about ten months ago.

CLUE IN LATEST ATTACK ON VANCE

Striving to prevent a recurrence of the attacks on Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance, Police Bureau of Science head, authorities on Tuesday mounted a 24-hour guard over Inspector Vance and his family.

Investigation has disclosed that the death note found pinned on the wall of the Vance garage is in the same handwriting as was the address on the bomb sent to him through the mail about ten months ago.

FIVE MURDEROUS ATTACKS

Meanwhile, Inspector Rod McLeod has been placed in full charge of the case by Chief Constable John Cameron, who gave McLeod instructions to use everything in the way of manpower and equipment to solve the mystery which surrounds the five murderous attacks on the scientific detective's life.

Commenting on the statement which appeared in the press on Tuesday regarding criticism of police in respect of the Vance case, Chief Cameron declared that Vance had repeatedly been told by authorities not to use his own auto, and a police car had been placed at his disposal.

According to Chief Cameron, Vance appeared to be reluctant to take advantage of the protective measures on his behalf and continued to use his own auto.

The chief declared that as late as Saturday he had telephoned Vance and warned him to take no chances.

TWO FOR Mayoralty BUT SIX 'Possibles'

STRONG FEAR OF 'TOO MANY CANDIDATES'

AGREE CHANGE AT CITY HALL IMPERATIVE

By C. H. MacKAY

Two definite candidates and six self-admitted possible candidates for the office of Mayor of Vancouver for the 1935-36 term were disclosed today by a Vancouver Sun canvass of the civic political situation.

Two months in advance of polling day Dec. 12, Mayor L. D. Taylor is a certainty to seek re-election and Ald. J. J. McRae has burned his bridges by announcing that he will resign from his Ward 9 seat to conduct a mayoral campaign.

Six others told the Vancouver Sun reporter that they are considering running for the office.

They gave themselves times varying from one to two weeks in which to make up their minds. This left the inference that the present situation will remain unchanged for at least one week, barring the sudden entrance of an unknown seventh party.

FEAR TOO MANY IN FIELD

Nearly all of those interviewed today stated, off the record, that they would have no hesitation about entering the race if they did not fear that so many others would be in it that Mayor Taylor would have a "walk-over."

Without exception, they voiced a personal desire to see new blood injected into civic affairs to throw off the lethargy that has beset the administration under the Taylor regime.

Here is what they said for publication:

G. G. McGeer, K.C., M.L.A.—I am going to the Okanagan for a week or ten days and I'll make up my mind about running when I return.

J. W. Cornett (ex. M.L.A. and ex-reeve of South Vancouver)—I'm not anxious to run if a good man will stand. I think, however, that it's time we had a change at City Hall so that the city can go ahead. I have been asked to run in my home ward for Alderman (Ward 7, now held by Ald. Walter Deptford), but if a good man doesn't show up I might run for Mayor.

PLIGHT THE CITY IS IN

Fred Crone (runner-up in the 1932 election)—I've got no ambition for the job, but I can't help considering it in view of the plight that the city is now in. Perhaps circumstances will permit me to give a more definite answer in about a week.

T. W. Fletcher (third to finish in the 1932 election)—A large number of my friends have asked me to stand again, and I will probably decide in about two weeks.

Dr. A. D. Buchanan (vice president of Federated Ratepayers)—I am considering it if there are not too many in the field. Things may be more definite within the next week.

Lieut.-Col. Nelson Spencer—There is a possibility of anything happening before polling day. We'll just have to see how things turn out.

SUMMER Joys In OCTOBER

VANCOUVER'S GLORIOUS FALL

HOTTEST ON RECORD

Vancouver's phenomenally fine October weather continues unabated today.

From a summery blue sky the brilliant sunshine sets aglow the crimson and gold of autumn's foliage, makes fall clothing uncomfortably warm and causes parks and beaches to flare into popularity.

The weather—the unusually lovely weather—is the subject on everyone's tongue.

"Seems just like summer" . . . "Whew, I'm hot, wish I'd worn a light dress" . . . "Just imagine wasting a day like this indoors" . . . "What I'd give to be down at English Bay taking a dip this very minute" . . .

On the street, in offices and in shops, it crops into the conversation.

Tuesday broke all October hot weather records in the city when the mercury shot up to 77 degrees by 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Not in the 28 years that meteorological records have been kept here has that ever happened before in October. The nearest was October 16, 1929, when the maximum was 73.9 degrees.

For 8 hours and 18 minutes Tuesday the city was flooded in bright sunshine. The coolest moment in the entire 24-hour period registered 58 degrees, which on an ordinary October day would have been a good maximum.

Both last year and the year before, October's temperature has been slightly higher than the average and if the present warm spell continues this month will be even higher. During the years weather records have been kept here, the average temperature in Vancouver has been found to be 49.8 degrees. Last October it was 50.7 and the year before 52.2.

At any rate this month is just one more addition to the remarkably fine weather which has been 1934's gift to Vancouver.

CLUE IN LATEST ATTACK ON VANCE

Striving to prevent a recurrence of the attacks on Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance, Police Bureau of Science head, authorities on Tuesday mounted a 24-hour guard over Inspector Vance and his family.

Investigation has disclosed that the death note found pinned on the wall of the Vance garage is in the same handwriting as was the address on the bomb sent to him through the mail about ten months ago.

FIVE MURDEROUS ATTACKS

Meanwhile, Inspector Rod McLeod has been placed in full charge of the case by Chief Constable John Cameron, who gave McLeod instructions to use everything in the way of manpower and equipment to solve the mystery which surrounds the five murderous attacks on the scientific detective's life.

Commenting on the statement which appeared in the press on Tuesday regarding criticism of police in respect of the Vance case, Chief Cameron declared that Vance had repeatedly been told by authorities not to use his own auto, and a police car had been placed at his disposal.

According to Chief Cameron, Vance appeared to be reluctant to take advantage of the protective measures on his behalf and continued to use his own auto.

The chief declared that as late as Saturday he had telephoned Vance and warned him to take no chances.

WAITED FOR VICTIM

Reconstructing the crime which shocked Vancouver, police have traced the path taken by Vance's assailant to the point where he crouched beneath the window of the garage.

It is assumed that the mystery man with his bottle of acid came from the lane between Granville Street and Adera Street, went across a vacant lot to the rear of the garage.

There it is believed that he lay in wait until he was sure that he would be unobserved and then slipped around to the front of the garage.

Once inside the structure he would be shielded from observation of the Vance family, and could have opened the window of the garage and stepped out to assume his crouching position.

Police think it possible that he first put the threatening note over a nail near a small door in the south side of the garage.

Once outside the window the man crouched in wait for the inspector.

VACANT LOT SHRUBBERY

Vance's house faces west on Adera Street. The rear of the lot is separated from the lane between Adera and Granville Streets by a vacant lot which is slightly overgrown by shrubbery.

The garage is located to the rear and to the north side of the house, leaving room for a concrete driveway down the north side of the house and the north border of the lot.

Between the north side of the garage and the north boundary of the lot is a trellis work, over which Vance's assailant would be unable to climb. On the front of the garage are double doors which slide the full width of the two-car structure. It was these doors which Vance was obliged to open before he could drive his car inside.

WINDOW WAS LOCKED

On the south side of the garage is a small door fastened by a patented snap lock which is stated to have been closed all day.

The window through which the acid was thrown is also said to have been locked when Vance's sons left the garage about 2 o'clock.

Therefore, the only means of entry to the garage, for Vance's assailant, coming from the lane, would be around to the front of the garage.

The mystery man in taking this path would be obliged to pass within a short distance of the kitchen window and door, the upper part of which is glass.
